Bancroft Maritime Security Solutions Limited (BMSS) was founded in November 2009 and was the idea of its founder, Captain David Bancroft MNM. From his dealings with private security companies during his period as the Commander of UKMTO, it became obvious to him that there was a lack of understanding of the Merchant Marine Industry. BMSS is made up of "Seafarers", rather than soldiers with little or no maritime experience. Three of its Senior Managers have served over 25 years each at sea; two with service in both the Royal Navy and Merchant Navy. The company has unrivalled knowledge in Anti Piracy counter measures and experience at both the tactical and strategic level. The Director of the company Commanded UKMTO from January 2007 to mid 2009 and started what has since become known as Best Management Practice as well as designed and implemented the Internationally Recognised Transit Corridor "IRTC" and helped implement the Group Transit idea - which is now widely used in the IRTC. BMSS gives Shipping Companies and other associated industries the ability to work with fellow seafarers who instinctively understand the mariners issues, risks and trading areas.
